SEYMOUR MAY GET DIVISION OFFICES PLANS FOR CHURCH SURVEY COMPLETED

State Highway Commission Making Arrangements for Maintenance of Main Market Roads.

SEVERAL DISTRICTS IN STATE

Central Headquarters for Construction Engineers to be Located in Each.

Young Ladies Will be Employed to Canvass City for Ministerial Association.

PUBLIC ASKED TO CO-OPERATE

Y. M. C. A. Proposition Discussed by Pastors at The Meeting Held This Morning.

The Indiana state highway commission is making arrangements for the conduct of its work not only in the construction of new roads but for the maintenance of roads, designated as main market highways, and it is likely that two of the division offices may be located in this city. The entire state is to be divided into several districts and in each there will be one office for the construction engineers of the division and also headquarters for the maintenance of roads department. The headquarters for these two departments have not yet been located in the various divisions but it is expected that all the details will be completed this month. Work is expected to be resumed about March 1 or just as soon as possible after that time that the weather will permit.

The advantages of having the headquarters of the maintenance of roads and the construction departments located here are obvious. J. D. Stemm, assistant engineer of construction, who is located in this city, had taken the matter up with the chamber of commerce officers and has been assured of their co-operation. It is expected that representatives of the commission will come here within a few days to discuss the matter with local people. A number of engineers and superintendents will be employed in this district and will live wherever their offices are located. Seymour is being seriously considered as the district center as it is located almost in the center of the territory.

Under the plan adopted by the highway commission not only the roads now under construction and those under contract will be maintained at state expense, but all others which have been designated as part of the state highway system will be taken over. There are several such roads in Jackson county and it is expected that considerable repair work will be done on them pending the time they are improved with hard surface material.

The High street road is now being improved for a distance of two miles east of the city. About half of the contract has been completed. The Jonesville-Columbus highway is also under contract, about a mile of roadway being constructed last fall before the work was stopped by winter weather. Mr. Stemm has supervised the construction of both of these highways as the representatives of the state commission.

ARRIVES HERE WITH HIS LUXENBURG BRIDE

Sergeant Herbert Hunsucker Arrive Here to Spend a Month With Relatives and Friends.

Sergeant Herbert Hunsucker, a former Seymour boy, who has been in the United States army for 3 years and 7 months, has arrived here with his Luxemburg bride to spend a month's furlough with relatives and friends in the city. Mr. Hunsucker is the first American soldier to leave Europe having arrived in the United States on January 2. He is now stationed at Fort Eben Allen, Vermont. Sgt. Hunsucker and his wife were among the guests at the wedding of the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg and the Prince of Austria which occurred on November 6.

Plans for the Inter-church survey in the city, which have been underway for sometime, were completed at the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association held this morning. The program was discussed at length by all of the pastors present and it was decided to employ several young ladies to make the religious survey of Seymour. The Rev. F. A. Hayward is chairman of the organization. The survey will be started as soon as possible and will be completed in two weeks. Each of the church pastors has been supplied with individual survey cards dealing with their church interests and activities which are to be filled out and returned by Monday, February 23.

The public is asked to co-operate with those making the survey and with its assistance it is pointed out that the canvass can be completed promptly. In some cases where members of families are not at home when the canvasser comes, neighbors may in many cases furnish the desired information concerning their religious preferences and would save a second trip. It is the opinion of some than the survey can be completed.

SHERIFF McCORD RECEIVES MORE LETTERS FROM HERE

Official Says That Persons Having Complaints Must Sign Their Names to Letters.

H. L. McCord, county sheriff, stated today that he had received some more letters from residents of this city asking that he take some action in making loafers in Seymour get to work. The official points out that there is no state law prohibiting loafing and that he cannot act without charges being filed.

Sheriff McCord says that he has received several unsigned communications of late asking that he look after law violations said to be going on in this city. No notice will be taken of any such complaints unless they are signed and the persons who write them will agree to back up their accusations.

TIRES HIDDEN IN STRAW

Four New Tires Found by Small Boy Sunday Morning.

Four new automobile tires were found hidden in a straw stack on the E. C. Bollinger farm east of the city Sunday morning by a small boy who was playing about the place. He reported his finding to the police who recovered the tires which are now being held at the police station. It is believed that they were stolen from a Baltimore & Ohio freight car by some one who expected to return for them at a more convenient time. The tires were being shipped to Kansas from Louisville. The Baltimore & Ohio police department has been notified and an investigation is being made.

HIGHWAYS ARE IN BAD CONDITION

Many of The Principal Roads in Jackson County Cut to Pieces by Heavy Hauling.

REPAIR WILL BE EXPENSIVE

Gravel Said to Have Almost Disappeared from the Surface in Quite a Few Places.

Jackson county is facing a heavy road repair expense this spring, according to road men who have had occasion to visit several parts of the county during the last few weeks. Some of the roads, including principal highways, have been badly cut up by heavy hauling at a time when the frost was leaving the ground. In some places, it is reported, the gravel has been ground into the mud to such an extent that it has almost disappeared. Road men declare that when the surface of gravel roads is broken through repair work is almost out of the question.

It is said that heavy trucking has been responsible for some of the damage to the roads. Several concerns in Indianapolis, Cincinnati and other large cities have maintained through motor transportation facilities throughout the winter and large trucks, heavily loaded, have been driven over the roads regardless of their condition. A number of these trucks have mired down in mud after the frost started to leave the ground. In some places the surface of the

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY TO MRS. T. R. HALEY

Body Found on Floor at Home by Husband—Burial in Washington County Today.

Mrs. Thomas R. Haley, aged thirty-five years, was fatally stricken Saturday afternoon at her home on East Second street. The body was found on the floor about 4:30 o'clock when her husband, a local business man, went to the apartments. Apparently death had come about two hours before. George T. Manuel, county coroner, conducted an inquest Sunday morning and returned a verdict that death was due to suffocation. The body was taken to Washington county this morning for burial.

The deceased was the daughter of Mrs. Della Williams. Her father died when she was less than three years old. She was married to Mr. Haley October 18, 1903, and they came here from Washington county several years afterwards for residence. She was a member of the First Methodist church here. Mrs. Haley has been in failing health for fifteen years. She is survived by her husband, her mother, three sisters, Mrs. Cora Beckey, and Mrs. Minnie Morris, of Salem, and Mrs. Anna Bush, of Newcastle. The burial was at the Haley cemetery.

MORAL STANDARD IN FRANCE IS LOW

French Conditions Depicted in Interesting Address by The Rev. Earl Naftzger.

BIG CROWD AT MEN'S MEETING

Evangelist at First M. E. Church Discusses Characteristics of People in That Country.

There is a great opportunity for christian evangelism in France, according to the Rev. Earl Naftzger, who is conducting a series of meetings at the First Methodist church, who delivered an interesting address at a men's meeting Sunday afternoon. His subject was "The Greatest Battle of the War." He told of the moral conditions in France and said that the standard of morality was very low there compared to that in this country. A French woman, he said, does not expect to occupy the same plane of a man. The custom has been one of long standing, he said, and is conceded by a difficult barrier to break down.

Evangelist Naftzger spent eighteen months with the American army in France and was in the thick of the battle of St. Mihiel. He paid a tribute to the patriotism and bravery of the American soldier and said that his courage completely broke down the morale of the German army. After the Americans threw their weight into the balance, he said, the Germans were without the courage to hold their defenses.

The great battle of the war for the American soldier, the evangelist said, was to keep himself clean in the face of the many temptations which confronted him. He said that while moral conditions are very lax, there are many people in France who live according to the standards which are recognized in the United States.

The musical program was a feature of the afternoon meeting. Mrs. Naftzger joined her husband here Saturday and will assist with the services. She presided at the piano yesterday afternoon for both the orchestral selections and the solos. Everett Naftzger, who is in charge of the singing at the meetings, delighted the audience of men with several beautiful selections. Robert Naftzger, of Indianapolis, a son of the evangelist, spent Sunday here and also assisted with the music.

Mr. Naftzger conducted two other splendid services during the day. The auditorium of the church was crowded both morning and evening. The services have been very helpful to the church and the special addresses have been heard by large audiences.

TREATY IS CALLED UP BEFORE SENATE

Hope Expressed for Compromise Ending Long Fight Over Reservation to Certain Clauses.

OBSTACLES IN EVIDENCE

President Again States He Will Not Consent to Modification of Article Ten.

By United Press

Washington, February 9.—The senate today revived the consideration of the treaty of Versailles. Crushing the Republican "Bitter-enders" beneath an avalanche of votes, the senate took these steps:

1.—Suspended the rules so as to permit the reconsideration of the vote by which the treaty was laid on the table.

2.—Reconsidered the vote by which the treaty was tabled, thus formally reviving it.

3.—Sent the treaty back to the foreign relations committee with instructions to report it back to the senate immediately with the Lodge reservations.

The whole proceeding occupied less than two hours. Soon after the senate met, Senator Lodge moved that it go into open executive session. This was agreed to and he at once asked unanimous consent for suspension of the rules.

Despite the fact that there has been no break in the deadlock over Article X since the treaty failed on November 19 last, there are those who hope that the developments today will constitute the first step toward ending the long contest between Republican senators and President Wilson, through ratification with compromise reservations.

But at the outset the treaty's progress is beset with obstacles. Republican "bitter-enders," led by Senator Borah, of Idaho, planned to attempt to prevent the treaty being resurrected. When Lodge asks unanimous consent to suspend the rules and take it up Borah is expected to object on the ground that time spent in further discussion by the senate will be wasted and will delay enactment.

FIVE KILLED WHEN MOB STORMS JAIL

Kentucky State Militiamen Are Called to Protect Negro Charged With Murder.

GIRL FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

Prisoner Sentenced to Death By Jury Sitting in Trial at Lexington Court House.

By United Press

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 9.—Enraged by the killing of five persons who took part in an effort today to lynch William Lockett, a negro, convicted of slaying Geneva Hardeman, ten year old school girl, hundreds of mountaineers were on the way here with the intention of taking possession of the negro in spite of the national guardsmen, according to reports received by the police. Governor Edwin D. Morrow is enroute here to take charge of the situation.

On his request four hundred regular army troops from Louisville under command of Major F. C. Martin left Camp Taylor for this city. The soldiers are expected this afternoon. While soldiers were driving back the mob of four thousand which demanded surrender of Lockett, the negro was found guilty of murder and sentenced to be electrocuted.

The Hardeman's girl's body was found in a field near her home late Friday. Examination disclosed that she had been attacked and murdered. Bloodhounds put on the trail led to Lockett's home. Rumors of the attempts at lynching spread rapidly through Fayette county, and a company of state militiamen was rushed to Frankfort Sunday to escort Lockett to the court house at Lexington.

Machine guns were mounted to sweep approaches to the court house and overseas soldiers with steel helmets were on guard when court opened. The mob gathered slowly. When about 4,000 were in the square in front of the court house, a voice shouted:

"Let's go now." The crowd surged up the steps of the court house. A deputy sheriff arrested one of the leaders and led him away. Officers with pistols threatened to shoot if necessary.

The rioters came on and tried to wrest guns from the militiamen. Then the order to fire was given.

Three men fell dead on the court

FASHIONABLE APARTMENT IN SAN FRANCISCO BURNS

Body of Woman Found in Debris—Others Thought to Have Been Lost.

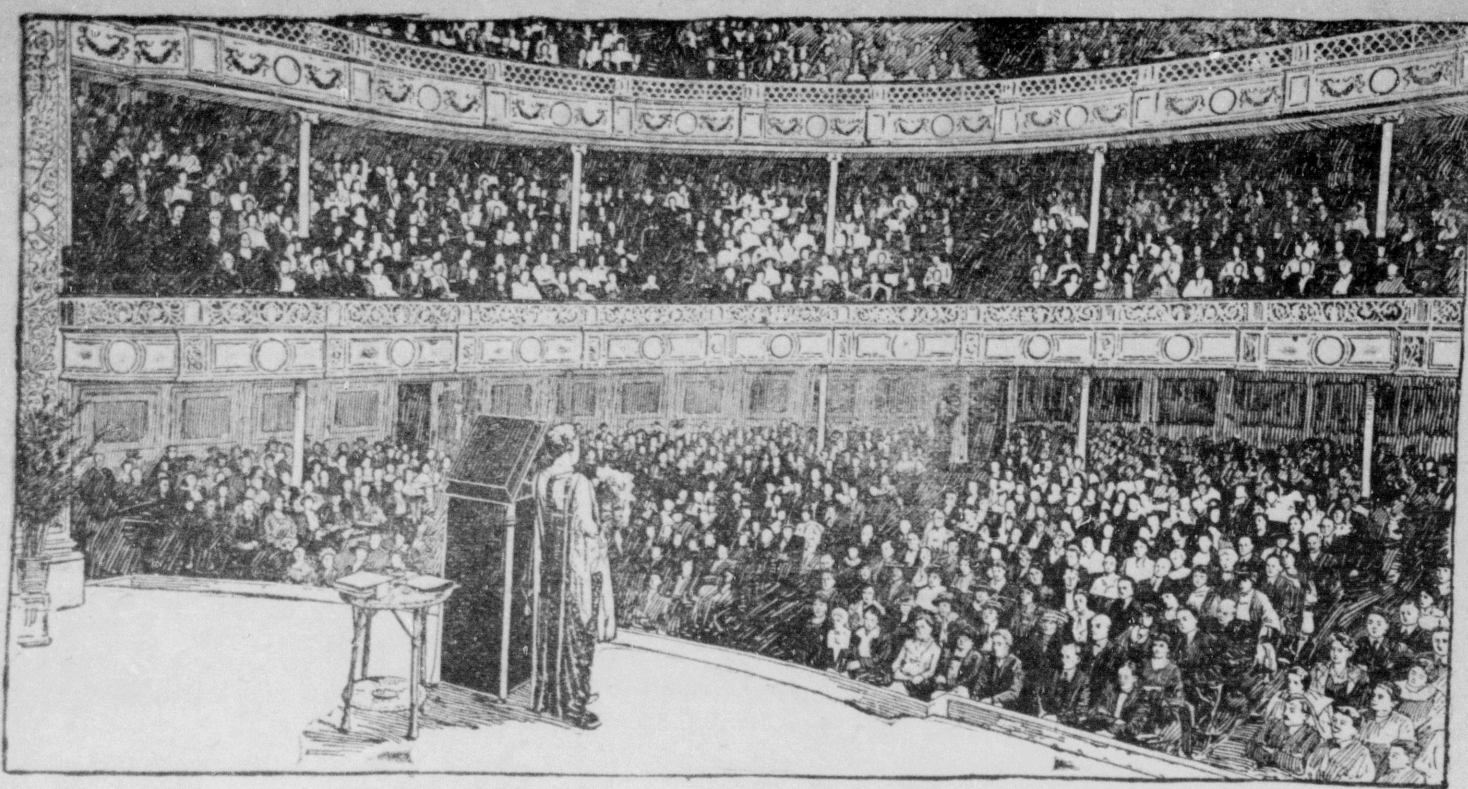

By United Press

San Francisco, February 9.—Fear and hysteria came to a calm and aristocratic section of San Francisco today when fire destroyed the fashionable Berkshire apartments. Early today the body of a woman had been taken from a mass of crumpled steel and scorched brick which marked the site of the former residence of fifty-three families. The fire chief said possibly four or five more bodies remained in the debris.

Smoke and flame cut by those on the third, fourth and fifth floors from escape. Clad in night clothing, men, women and children took to the windows. Before firemen could raise their ladders the rear of the building was a furnace. Some bolder men unencumbered by women and children clung to window ledges and then dropped to fire escapes. Heat at the rear of the building drove scores to the narrow ledge in front where they clung trembling until ladders were raised to them. As the last of those at the window were taken down the roof collapsed, carrying with it the third and fourth floors.

Proof! Musical Proof!

Edison dared--Pittsburg heard--Pittsburg believed

Could it be true that even EDISON had produced an instrument which sang so perfectly that its singing could not be detected from that of living artists? The music lovers of Pittsburg doubted, but they were willing to be convinced.

On September 30th, 1919, 2600 Pittsburg musicians and music lovers assembled in Carnegie Hall, Marie Rappold and Mario Laurenti of the Metropolitan Opera Company sang in comparison with the Re-Creation of their voices by this new phonograph. The leading Pittsburg newspapers were represented at this test.

The next day the Pittsburg Leader said: "The tones which came from the New Edison Phonograph matched those from the living artist so perfectly that it was impossible to detect any difference."

This from the Pittsburg Dispatch—"The writer was pretty sure about it until the lights were turned on and it was discovered that Mme. Rappold was not on the stage at all and that the New Edison alone had been heard."

From the Pittsburg Sun: "The audience heard not one Mme. Rappold and one Mr. Laurenti, but two, the phenomenon being accomplished by means of a cabinet on the stage beside the performers that matched their performance, note for note and tone for tone."

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul" is the only instrument that can sustain the test of direct comparison with living artists. It gives you all that the ear can give you of the world's greatest artists. It is the phonograph supreme. It has no rival.

Come to our store. Let us show you an exact duplicate of the instrument used at Carnegie Hall, Pittsburg.

We guarantee this instrument to be equal in tonal quality and realism to the instrument used at Pittsburg, and we also guarantee it to be capable of sustaining the same test.

TIME AN ELEMENT.

When a course of treatment is prescribed for an individual who finds that his health is breaking, that he is "run down" and is not able to keep pace with the demands upon his energy, he does not expect recovery over night. He knows that his vitality is at low ebb and that his strength will return gradually, even if the course of treatment prescribed for him is just what he needs. People now days have little faith in magic remedies. Medical science follows the general rules of cause and effect.

When the Chamber of Commerce employs a full time secretary we must not expect that he will be able to build a city of fifty thousand over night. Time will be a principal element in his work. When he first enters upon his duties he will have to diagnose the Seymour case and ascertain the source of our trouble. When the cause of the illness has been located the secretary will set out to devise ways and means of treating it. More than likely he will find a complication of diseases which will call for several different and distinct kinds of remedies. Stimulants may be necessary at times and the liberal use of narcotics may be required at others. The secretary will deal with the situation as he finds the conditions warrant.

The thing to be remembered, however, is that his program is constructive and aimed at permanent results. Seymour does not want a mushroom growth. What we are striving for is a steady advancement and progress so we will be in a position to take advantage of real opportunities when they are offered. We have much work to do right here in the city. In fact, we do not have to reach very far to find ways to benefit the city. We also must get the city ready to receive newcomers before we invite them.

The secretary, whoever he may be, will be a busy man. He will need assistance and cooperation. His program, when once outlined, will have to be followed the same as a doctor's directions are obeyed, if we expect to produce results. His work will be to direct. The obligation of those who want Seymour to advance and progress will be to aid him and work with him.

"Pep" is a great stimulant. But the trouble with it is that its effect is temporary. Any movement that is worth while must be brought about through an educational campaign which will convince the public of its value.

Dangerous to Use Treatment for Only Temporary Relief.

There is a more serious stage of Catarrh than the annoyance caused by the stopped-up air passages, and other distasteful features.

The real danger comes from the tendency of the disease to continue its course downward until the lungs become affected, and then dreaded consumption is on your

IF EVERY WOMAN HAD HER WISH

What Most of Them Would Want

If every woman had her wish, most of them would like to be relieved of housecleaning, washing dishes and clothes.

Yet many who dislike this work never try to make it more pleasant and more agreeable.

It can be made much easier, quicker and less distasteful than you imagine. Simply use the right thing in the right place.

You've got the biggest surprise of your life coming the first time you wash clothes, dishes, clean windows, bathrooms, etc., with Joy Soap. It gives you the sort of feeling you had when the first sewing machine was shown you.

"I didn't know it was possible to do this work so easily, quickly and as well!" you'll say.

The reasons are many. Joy Soap is made with a definite purpose—for house cleaning and washing. It isn't a toilet soap—it isn't a scouring soap. It does one job and surely does do it well.

Joy is made to please. It is firm and white, good to feel and pleasant to work with. You don't have to scrub and scour, simply lather and rub in. Joy does the work with a hearty good will, cutting up the dirt and grease while you mix it around.

Many a wish has come true by personal effort. Make yours come close to reality by using the right soap in the right place. Ask your grocer for Joy—the soap that "works like a wizard."

FURTHER CHANGES IN WAR RISK ACT

Additional Compensation for Disabled Ex-Service Men Provided by Amendment.

PAYMENTS MORE LIBERAL

Awards for Temporary and Permanent Disability Made on Sliding Scale.

Eighty million dollars more a year in compensation for disabled ex-service men is one of the outstanding results of the passage of the amendment to the war risk act commonly known while pending in congress as the "Sweet Bill." This feature of the new law is retroactive, and all awards of compensation for disability to ex-service men heretofore made are being increased to the new basis. Checks for compensation at the increased rate from the date of the original awards are now being distributed by the bureau of war risk insurance. The differences between the amounts authorized by the original war risk act and the new law are as follows:

To an unmarried ex-service man who is temporarily totally disabled, $80 per month, an increase from $30; to a man with a wife, $90, an increase from $45; to a man with a wife and one child, $95, an increase from $55; to a man with a wife and two children, $100, an increase from $65; to a man with a wife and three or more children, $100, an increase from $75; to a man with no wife but one child, $90, an increase from $40; to a man with no wife but two children, $95, an increase from $60; to a man with no wife but three children, $100 per month, with $5 more for each additional child. Under the old law, no additional compensation was payable to a man with no wife for children in excess of two. Both the original act and the new law provide an extra allowance of $10 each a month for a dependent father and mother.

Under the original war risk act the same scale was applied to total permanent disability as to temporary total disability. The new law provides that compensation for total permanent disability shall be $100 a month. The loss of both feet, or both hands, or the sight of both eyes, or the loss of one foot and one hand, or one foot and the sight of one eye, or one hand and the sight of one eye, or becoming helpless and permanently bedridden, are deemed to be total, permanent, disability, regardless of what the actual earning capacity of a man so disabled may be. For double, total, permanent disability (a combination of any two of the impairments regarded as total, permanent disability) the monthly compensation is $200. There is an additional allowance of not exceeding $20 a month for a disabled man so helpless as to be in constant need of a nurse or attendant.

The compensation payments described are entirely separate and distinct from war risk insurance. Compensation is paid by the government to a deceased service man's widow, children and dependent parents if his death was due to disease or injury incurred in active service in the line of duty; and to a disabled ex-service man after his discharge from the service, with additional allowances for his wife, children and dependent parents, provided his disability is due to disease or injury incurred in active service in the line of duty. Compensation is payable, however, only in cases where the reduction in earning capacity is payable is rated at 10 per cent. or more. A service man who has received a permanent injury is not penalized for his success in overcoming its handicap. The disability ratings are based on average impairments of earning capacity, and these ratings are revised by the Bureau of war risk insurance from time to time in accordance with actual experience. Besides the monthly cash payments of compensation, the amendment provides that men disabled as the results of their war service shall be furnished all governmental hospital, surgical and medical treatment and with supplies, such as wheeled chairs, artificial limbs and similar appliances, as the Director of the Bureau may determine to be reasonably necessary.

Awards of compensation for temporary partial disability and for permanent partial disability are made on a sliding scale, using the amounts payable for temporary total disability and total permanent disability as a basis.

Authority is given for lump-sum payments to beneficiaries of United States Government (converted) Life Insurance, at the option of the insured. The veteran who holds a converted policy may also elect to have it paid to his beneficiary at his death in 36 or more monthly installments. The war term insurance may be converted now, or at any time within five years after the formal termination of the war by proclamation of the President, into one or more of the six forms of permanent policies, which are: Ordinary Life, twenty-payment life, thirty-payment life, twenty year endowment, thirty year endowment, and endowment at age 62. Any of these may now be paid, if the insured so designates, in one lump sum to his beneficiary at his death.

The list of beneficiaries permitted under the original law was restricted and narrow. Many service men who had no near relatives living were consequently unable to name a valid beneficiary of their war risk insurance.

Another change is in connection with so-called "automatic insurance." Under the war risk act automatic insurance, involving the payment upon the death of the insured of $25 a month for 20 years, was provided only for men who died in service between April 6, 1917, and February 12, 1918. The amendment grants, in addition, automatic insurance or men who entered the service from the latter date up to and including November 11, 1918 and who died within 120 days after such entrance into active service. The officers and crew of the Naval Collier Cyclops, which disappeared at sea in 1918, are specifically covered by the new law.

An important new feature is the provision that upon the death of a service man or ex-service man with no member of the permitted class of beneficiaries surviving, his term or converted insurance policy will be paid to his own estate. Converted insurance is also made payable to the insured's estate upon his death without having named a beneficiary, or if the beneficiary dies first.

Nonexpensive—Cut This Out.

Thousands are making this beneficial remedy at home and anyone who has catarrh or a cold can do the same.

Ask your druggist for three quarters of an ounce of Mentholized Aroclene and pour it into a pint bottle, then fill the bottle with water that has been boiled.

Gargle the throat as directed and snuff or spray the liquid into the nostrils twice daily. It's a simple way to get rid of cold and catarrh and keeps the nasal passage and throat so clean and healthy that germs of flu or any other germs will have a hard time gaining a foothold.

MILITARY TRAINING

American Legion Officers Meet to Decide Upon Policy.

By United Press
Indianapolis, Feb. 9—Officers of the American Legion were to meet here today to decide on the policy the Legion will adopt toward universal military training. The results of the conference will be forwarded to Washington to be placed before congress.

The military policy committee at the Minneapolis convention adopted resolutions favoring "a policy of universal military training," but strongly opposing "compulsory military service in time of peace."

The meeting today was called by Franklin D'Olier, national commander of the Legion, primarily to obtain the views of the legionnaires throughout the country on military training. Besides the military policy committee, departmental commanders also were called to the conference.

Mrs. Della Roudybush left for her home in Watseka, Ill., Saturday afternoon after a visit with Miss Lina Lyman in Austin. Miss Lyman and her guest spent Saturday shopping in this city.

Mrs. Homer Phillips and two children were called to Columbus this morning on account of the critical illness of Mr. Phillips' mother, Mrs. John Phillips. Mr. Phillips has been in Columbus for several days.

Notes From the First Baptist Church

The Franklin Quartette, which so acceptably sang in the Musical Course Friday night, sang at both the Sunday School and Church sessions. The deep interest in "The Boys from Franklin" brought out a full house to hear them. Mr. John A. Barnett spoke to the school on the organization and work of the Student Volunteer Movement, as outlined in the great Des Moines Convention. In recognition of Anniversary Week, the Boy Scouts attended church in uniform and in the afternoon went for a walk with the scoutmaster. A special sermon of The Dream of a boy was given yesterday morning based upon the words of God to Solomon, "Ask, what I shall Give Thee."

The first of the Church Building Bulletins were given out yesterday morning presenting the action of the church sometime ago requesting that each member register his vote on one of two questions, dealing with the remodeling or the rebuilding of the First Baptist Church. Many of the members took advantage of the vote and placed them in the collection baskets at both services although the final vote need not be received until Feb. 22nd. The new evening series of sermons on Great February Messages opened with the evening service and The Message on Repentance was received by a good audience.

ment of many necessary legislative measures now on the senate calendar.

Borah said today that with President Wilson and Senator Lodge both refusing to yield on reservations, it is a sheer waste of time for the senate to expend more words upon an apparently futile task.

In view of President Wilson's determination, expressed in his letter to Senator Hitchcock not to yield on article ten, and in view of the equally firm refusal to yield to those who support the Lodge reservations, it seems to me nothing is to be gained by bringing the treaty back, said Borah.

"It's a deadlock from the beginning. What we ought to do is to clean up the senate calendar, crowded with legislation and then go to the country with the treaty.

PLANS FOR CHURCH SURVEY COMPLETED

pleted in a week but ample time has been provided in order that an accurate canvass may be made.

At the meeting this morning the Y. M. C. A. proposition which is receiving much consideration in Seymour at present was discussed by the clergymen. Especial consideration was given the matter of providing a place for boys to spend their leisure hours. The members of the Ministerial Association desire to co-operate with any practical program for the religious and moral uplift of the city. The meeting this morning was an exceptionally interesting one and several important matters were brought up for discussion.

Dr. and Mrs. Earl Naftzger, evangelists, who are conducting services at the First Methodist church, were guests of the Ministerial Association. Both the evangelist and his wife make interesting talks before the meeting.

The Power of Money For Good

This is the story of a man whom some hotheads in his community once wanted to hang—Banker William O. Payne, of Bisonville, Sperrinville County, Minnesota. These names, of course, are fictitious, but it is likely that plenty of people will identify the man and the town saves Herbert Quick, in The Country Gentleman of February 7th.

Fired by stories of the rush to Iowa in the early days, Payne came to Bisonville when the country was new. The town was a collection of shacks.

Other shacks, widely separated, marked the homesteads of the few pioneers; but his imagination pictured a region of prosperous farms, for anyone could see that it was a natural wheat country. This despite an old-timer's warning that the sparkling blue lake would surely dry up when the inevitable years of drought came.

So he opened a bank, and his judgment was verified, for he saw the railroad swamped with incoming goods and settlers and equally burdened with the outgoing stream of wheat. During the next few years he witnessed a marvelous spectacle—the building of a new Western country. Then things settled down to humdrum property for the farmers and for the bank.

One day Bruce Evans applied for a loan, though another note of his had already been renewed. He wanted to buy thirty cows, he said; wheat after wheat was ruining the land; the country was going to pot. Payne was astounded. True, a number of farmers had renewed their notes and some foreclosures seemed inevitable, but Bruce's statements were little short of treason in a wheat county. So he refused the loan. However, his banker's sixth sense made him investigate a little.

The two drove into the country. Bruce pointed to the lake, almost dried up; then to a gray cloud on the horizon. Dust! Continued planting to one crop had robbed the soil of the humus put there by a century of prairie grass and weeds; persistent cultivation had pulverized it. It was blowing away. Only pasture crops could restore it.

Payne granted Evans his loan. But, though the next year saw a bumper wheat yield, he issued this edict: Every farmer who borrowed money from his bank must go in for livestock and feed crops.

The county rebelled at this autocratic dictation; threats of hanging were made; but Payne had the power—the magic power conferred upon a man when state or nation authorizes him to call himself a bank—so he ruthlessly enforced his decree.

All this was a long time ago. Within the past year or two Washington sent a man to find out why National Farm Loan Associations in Sperrinville were lending twice as much per acre as like associations in another county just across the state line. After his inspection this man reported that the loans were good. Everywhere in Sperrinville he saw grass, alfalfa, livestock and poultry, comfortable houses and good barns. And everywhere the story of the farmers was the same; Uncle Billy Payne, now its most popular citizen, had forced prosperity on the county.

Square Dealing Farmers.

"If ever the producers of a food crop had a chance to squeeze the market for all the traffic would bear, the opportunity came to the California Walnut Growers' Association, comprising eighty per cent. of the growers of the state, with the 1919 crop," writes Freeman Tilden in The Country Gentleman of February 7th. The crop was 50,000,000 pounds, 12,000,000 pounds above the previous year, but the market was bare of nuts and the French harvest was light and of poorer quality.

So the trade held its breath in anticipation of a staggering opening price. Then came the announcement, thirty-one and a half cents a pound, much less than was expected and less than the independents were charging. Brokers and even retailers wired their congratulations; newspapers commented on the fairness and conservatism of the association. Within

ADDRESS OF W. G. STONE.

Following is the remainder of an address delivered recently by W. G. Stone, grand chief of the B. of L. E. before the Chamber of Commerce in Cleveland, O., the first section having been printed in this paper Saturday.

We talk glibly about "four million men in France," but when you realize that for every man in France, eight men more had to work at home to keep him supplied with the thousand and one things needed, and for every man in France, eight tons of shipping had to go forward to keep him supplied, you can realize something of the task of the railroads, and, regardless of any statement that may be made to the contrary, Organized Labor did its part, made good, and stands second to no class of citizenship in its loyalty to the flag. I realize that Organized Labor is under a cloud at the present time, and I, who during the war gave of my time and energy to help in every way possible to win the war, was conceded one of the great leaders of Labor. Now that I am doing exactly the same kind of work that I have always done, I am called a "Bolshevik," and told I should be deported. Just where they would deport me, I am at a loss to know, because my ancestors have been in America for more than 200 years, probably 100 years longer than many of those who are raising this cry. I want to read to you an extract:

"This brochure contains pp. 25-48, of the Constitution of Massachusetts—official copy. The sections marked below were drafted, with the rest of the document, by John Adams (later President of the United States), and adopted by the people in 1780. Many amendments have been made in the rest of the instrument but none in these sections:

Constitution of Massachusetts.

Article VI. no man, or corporation or association of men, have any other title to obtain advantages, or particular and exclusive privileges, distinct from those of the community, than what arises from the consideration of services rendered to the public; and this title being in nature neither hereditary, nor transmissible to children, or descendants, or relations by blood, the idea of a man born a magistrate, lawgiver, or judge, is absurd and unnatural.

Article VII. Government is instituted for the common good; for the protection, safety, prosperity, and happiness of the people; and not for the profit, honor, or private interest of any one man, family, or class of men: Therefore, the people alone have an incontestable, unalienable, and indefeasible right to institute government; and to reform, alter, or totally change the same, when their protection, safety, prosperity, and happiness require it."

That sounds like a page from the Russian Soviet, and, had the writer made that declaration today, he would have been called a "Bolshevik," and probably ordered deported, because we have before Congress at the present time a bill making it a penal offense for any man to suggest changing or altering the Constitution of the United States. Apparently this was written by John Quincy Adams, later President of the United States, in 1780, and was adopted by the Pilgrim Fathers, and is now a part of the Constitution of Massachusetts.

Now as to the endorsement of the so-called Plumb Plan, the Chamber Committee has kindly divided them into two classes, "Vague theorists dreaming of a Utopian State, and Railroad men." I suppose I am in the latter class.

The question of Government ownership of Railroads is nothing new. In 28 countries, excluding the United States, 58 per cent. of the Railroad mileage, is now under Government or State control. There is perhaps no one thing so closely related to the question of our daily life, and affecting the cost of living as that of transportation. Why should not our railroads be owned by all the people, operated for efficiency and at cost in the interests of all the people, instead of as now operated for profit and in the interests of a few capitalists. Many are under the impression we now have Government control. This is a mistake. All the Government is doing is paying the bills. During this period, there has been no economy practiced. Money has been spent like water. Everything possible has been done to increase the cost and to make the Federal administration of the roads just as objectionable as possible to the public. Yet with all this handicap, during the past few months they have shown a net revenue of several millions per month.

The plan proposes to operate the roads by a Board of 15 Directors (the Cummins bill proposes five), five to be appointed by the President, subject to approval by the Senate, five elected by the operating officers and five elected by the two million classified employees. This, in our opinion, is superior to any plan of Government operation yet proposed, in that it prevents control by inefficient bureaucracy, and places the operation in the hands of experienced, efficient men who know every detail of the business thoroughly. This would be an operating corporation where operating ability would constitute its sole capital. We would recognize as operating ability the skill, industry and application of every employee from President down to office boy. It should be organized under a Federal law. It should be authorized to take and hold and operate these properties under the full regulatory power of the Government to whom it should give strict account for all of its operations and expenditures. It should be required to meet all costs of operation and fixed charges upon the capital employed which had been guaranteed by the Government. Then after all charges, operating expenses, and interest on outstanding Government securities, and 1 per cent set aside for a sinking fund, the surplus is divided equally between the Government and the men. The employees' portion is to be divided between the operating officials and the classified employees, the former receiving two-thirds, the latter, one-third of the amount. This is not a profit, since the corporation has no capital. What the men receive is a dividend on efficiency. It is not a bonus system, because it is giving to those who increase production a share of the results their increased effort has produced, and this share is theirs for as long as they are actually in the service, and is not forfeitable.

Under the plan proposed by us, every employee, from the Chief Operating Officer to the lowest employee, would each reap his fair share of what was produced by the efficiency and economy of operation. He would also realize that unless he performed his full share in preserving efficiency and economy, he must inevitably receive a less return for his service. Such an organization would promote a morale among employees that has never been approached in any enterprise.

The questions naturally arise why Operating Officials receive the larger part of dividend, and what is to prevent collusion between them and the employees to increase wages. They receive the larger share because it serves as a greater stimulus to the group with the most responsibility. Next, collusion would not occur for two reasons:

1st.—If wages were increased above normal, the Operating Officials would lose dividends.

2nd.—If, by any possible chance, the Labor Directors and the Operating Director were to form a collusion and outvote the Public Directors, and raise wages beyond a reasonable level, under our plan, the Interstate Commerce Commission would have the same control over rates and revenues it has today, and could refuse to increase rates. If operation by the Directors should by any chance result in a deficit, Congress can revoke their charter. The plan further provides that when the Government's share is 5 per cent. or more of the gross operating revenue, rates shall be reduced accordingly to absorb the amount the Government receives.

For example: If the entire surplus for one year is 500 millions, and this is 10 per cent of the gross operating revenue, the Government receives 250 millions, and because this is 5 per cent, rates are decreased five per cent. We are satisfied that within five years under our plan, better and more efficient service, greater in volume, can be given at a reduction in both freight and passenger rates of at least 25 per cent.

Disputes between officials and employees are adjusted same as now, by Boards.

Rates of wages are determined by the Board of Directors.

The purchase of the roads is supervised by a purchasing Board, composed of the Interstate Commerce Commission and three Directors, one from each group. Any question arising as to the value of the private interests in the railroads to be decided by the courts. The plan proposes to pay for every honest dollar invested. It does not provide for payment of stocks that represent no real value, except perhaps the paper it is printed on, the clear sky and the hope of the future.

Among other economies such a plan would bring would be the elimination of complications in the rate schedule. Under our present plan, each of the 3,000 carriers files a complete schedule of rates in every state where it operates. Under this plan, one system of rates for all.

The multiplicity of officials and agents for handling the business of a competitive system would be eliminated. Intricate systems of bookkeeping, accounting, apportionment of equipment, rentals and charges between hundreds of corporations, would be abolished. Standardization of equipment, unification of terminals, between State and Federal authorities would cease to exist. These are only a few of the many savings in the interests of the people (who, in the end, pay all the bills), that the plan we propose would bring about.

The greatest incentives to human action are hope and fear. Hope is the in-born desire of every man to better his condition, strengthened by a reasonable belief that he will receive a greater reward for his services. Fear is the constant apprehension that present conditions may be made worse, or that there may be a future loss in the present reward for service. Under the old system of private ownership and operation, the hope of increased returns actuated only those individuals employed in the service who might reasonably be expected to share in those returns. All other employees were merely actuated by the fear they might lose their jobs.

We believe the plan we have offered, (and I want to say, frankly, we are not wedded to the minor details, but we are to the principle of general principles involved), would solve one of the great problems of the day. We realize the hopelessness of trying to have the present Congress pass our bill, so we have introduced in both the House and Senate a request that the railroads be retained under Federal control and operation for two years, in order to give us a chance to demonstrate that the railroads under normal conditions can be operated successfully by the Federal Administration, and, furthermore, to give the American people a chance to study and investigate the several proposed plans. Anything that is as of vital importance as this to every man, woman and child, means that careful study and analysis should be given and not snap judgment taken.

We are at practically the breaking point on the high cost of living, and anything that will add to the present unrest at this time is dangerous. The American people can not stand much more. The proposed plan which, I fear, will be passed within the next 60 days, means, at the lowest conservative estimate, an increase of 25 per cent or 30 per cent in both freight and passenger rates, or approximately one billion dollars a year, which, when handed down to the consumer, always means an increase of five billion dollars a year, because that has been the ratio for the past ten years—one dollar in transportation costs is made an excuse for a five dollar increase in the cost of living.

You can do your part in writing to your Senator and Congressman and insisting that the roads be kept under Federal control for two years, and give us a chance to understand what we are doing, before we fasten upon the American people, their children, and their children's children, for the next one hundred years, a tax of over one billion dollars per year.

In conclusion, I am not an alarmist; I have a reputation for being conservative and keeping my feet down on the ground. I do not believe that the millennium is coming tomorrow, and I realize that this is a matter-of-fact, common, every-day old world on which we are living, and yet I am really alarmed at the present situation. I regard it as far more critical to the future welfare of our country than the war itself.

Something is radically wrong with our economic system. We create enough wealth, but here is something wrong with the plan of distribution, when you create thirty thousand new millionaires (and many of them multi-millionaires), in two years, while, at the same time, six million children in the United States go to bed hungry every night. A child that is dwarfed in body, is dwarfed in both mind and soul, and that is what we are doing to these children. We do not have to go out of our own city to find children going to school without breakfast, and that is what you are going to make your future citizen of.

I hope I shall live long enough to see a different standard prevail. I hope, some time, we will have the principle of the Golden Rule apply, instead of the Rule of Gold.

THE "BLUES"

Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have spells of mental depression, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Nor is it to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indigestion, belching, heartburn, bloating, etc., will, if not checked, in time affect to some degree or other all the vital organs. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, feels his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach!

Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIC that brings, oh! such quick relief from your stomach misery—sets your stomach to rights—makes it strong, cool, sweet and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. So many thousands upon thousands of sufferers have used EATONIC with such marvelously helpful results that we are sure you will find the same way if you will just give it a trial. Get a big 50 cent box of EATONIC—the good tasting tablets that you eat like a bit of candy—from your druggist today. He will return your money if results are not even more than you expect.

CHAPTER IX.

From the marbled dignity of the Trust and Deposit company, where he had bought a New York draft for fifteen thousand dollars, and smaller ones for ten and seven, Hilliard emerged presently to South Warren street, and stood there on the sidewalk for a moment, numbed by the first galvanizing consciousness of success.

He had come back resolved to win, in his second trial, the position he had failed to approximate in his first; he had set himself a commercial standard, and, gauged by it, he was advancing rapidly, for today's trio of subscriptions, added to Mr. Cullen's check of yesterday (and Mr. Cullen had acted as though he had gained a personal victory in persuading Hilliard to accept it), made up a glittering total, a stupendous total; and already Hilliard's earned commissions formed a sum to gloat about. Despised as a salesman, he had sold to four important business men the commodity hardest in all the world to sell. Scorned for his behavior, he had made his sales on the basis of a character which hadn't been questioned since the day of his arrival. His mind and his muscles demanded action; to relieve the pressure of his spirits, he set off vigorously, swinging exultant.

On impulse, he crossed the street for the purpose of patronizing a florist's, where, ignoring the conventional measure of the even dozen, he ordered a prodigious array of American Beauties for Carol Durant. This done, and feeling very rich and independent, he rounded the righthand corner, and got himself greeted by two citizens of standing and importance who, in hailing him, displayed a deference not ordinarily granted to the average resident of Hilliard's age. Would Hilliard condescend to speak at the next meeting and dinner of the Chamber of Commerce on France in wartime? Hilliard would. And this indication of his new-won status fired him afresh.

Logically enough, his swirling thoughts followed a well-worn trail which led him straight to Carol; and for the thousandth time he tried to set a future date, depending on the outcome of his mission here, at which he could confess, and ask forgiveness for his mummery, and simultaneously ask credit for his regeneration.

At this juncture, he was aware that some one had arrested him. It was Angela's youthful suitor.

"Oh—hello, Waring!" said Hilliard cheerfully. "How's crime?"

The student of law flushed at the lively salutation, which appealed to him as a reflection upon the majesty of the bar. Also, his sense of humor was temporarily atrophied.

"We don't handle criminal cases," he responded shortly. "Say, when can you and I have a conference together, Mr. Hilliard?"

"Why, the sooner the quicker," laughed Hilliard. "What's it about?"

Waring coughed. "Business."

"The time to talk about business is all the time—isn't it?"

Waring hesitated and finally stepped into the shelter of a doorway, drawing Hilliard with him.

"I don't suppose it'll seem like a very important thing to you," he said, rather awkwardly, "but it's important enough to me, Mr. Hilliard, to be worth taking time over—to be perfectly frank with you, I've got five hundred dollars I want to put in some high-class, gilt-edged speculation. Mr. Cullen gave me some pointers, and now I'm interested in your copper mine. Only—and this is where the hitch comes in—I've sort of got into the swing of the law, you know, and that makes men—well, what you might call judgmental. You get so you want to look at everything from all four sides. And I thought maybe because of the attending circumstances—you'd be kind enough to explain the whole thing to me. Would you?"

Hilliard, who didn't know whether to be touched or amused, compromised by nodding gravely.

"There's one thing I'll have to tell you, though," he said; "I don't advise any one to gamble in copper mines, or anything else, Waring, unless that person could actually afford to lose his whole investment, and not be hurt. And in this particular case, since I happen to control the situation, I won't permit it. Does that hit you, or doesn't it?"

The young man's mouth opened in amazement. He had been priming himself to be a clever investigator, and to pick yawning flaws in Hilliard's underwriting, and here his thunder was stolen before he had had a chance to stake the acies of his cleverness.

"Why—it isn't a gamble, is it? I understand—Mr. Cullen said—"

"It's safer to figure it as a gamble, Waring. It's safe to figure all these things that way. Of course, we think it's a wonderful prospect, and a practically positive success, but I don't mind telling you that so far I haven't allowed a man who couldn't afford to lose his whole subscription—and didn't understand very clearly that he might—to come in for so much as a plugged nickel. And that would apply to you, too."

The law student gasped, incredulous.

"You don't mean to say it isn't a sure thing?"

"Is any speculation? You see I'm not working very hard to take your five hundred away from you, Waring."

The boy scowled.

"I suppose it's really too small for you to bother with. Is that what you're driving at?"

Hilliard smiled cordially.

"It is, and it isn't. From any one I didn't know, I'd rather not touch it. It isn't a good plan, ordinarily, to have a lot of small stockholders. But from you—and if it isn't more than you ought to risk—"

Waring snatched at the straw.

"Well, seeing you're who you are, and I'm who I am, would you be willing to give me just as much information as you would if I had twenty times as much to put in?"

"Come up to the room," said Hilliard impulsively; and he was actuated solely by the obligation he felt toward all of Mr. Cullen's friends. "You come along up to the room, and I'll show you everything I've got. Will that do?"

At the last words the amateur detective had brightened.

"I can't come now very well. But maybe I could run up this evening, if that's all right for you."

"That'll be just as good. Eight o'clock? Fine." He held out his hand. Waring took it limply.

"I'm afraid I'm causing you a lot of bother," he said, "but it's a pretty big thing for me. . . . I hope you don't think it's anything personal. . . . I mean my not just taking it for granted—"

"Not at all. Business is business. I'll expect you at eight, then." Hilliard nodded good-humoredly and went on north. A quaint intuition overcame him, and he glanced back over his shoulder. Fifty yards away the law-student was also glancing over his shoulder, and Waring, having less of self-possession than the adventurer, blushed and jerked his head to the front; Hilliard chuckled and continued his stroll.

He entered the Hotel Onondaga from the east and headed across toward the news-stand. Out of a red and gold chair in the spacious lobby a gentleman rose to meet him—a gentleman who in appearance was a very fair replica of the well-known Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, except that he was somewhat more refined and less obese. His animation was obvious, but he delayed to remove both his gray suede gloves before he offered to shake hands with Hilliard.

"Well!" said Martin Harmon, effusively, "you're looking great! Must agree with you up here, what? Didn't expect me, did you?"

"No!" Hilliard's expression was a study; he had dealt so long with Harmon at a distance that he had almost forgotten what the broker looked like. "Why didn't you wire me you were coming?"

"Didn't know it myself until pretty near train-time—spur of the moment. Well, got any business yet?"

Involuntarily, Hilliard smiled, and the smile spread wonderfully, until Harmon caught the contagion of it and beamed more royally than ever. "The man you called the 'decoy duck'—remember when you wrote that to me?—well, he quacked yesterday."

Harmon put his hand on Hilliard's shoulder; it was an accolade.

"Really? How much?"

"Thirty." For the life of him Hilliard couldn't resist a slight forward thrust of his chest.

Mr. Harmon's eyes glazed for an instant.

"Good—good! That's clever work, son! Clever and quick. But I know you'd do it. Thirty! That's fine! Anybody else?"

Hilliard laughed exultantly.

"Yes, three more—a total of sixty-two. I mailed you a draft yesterday morning; the others are in my pocket now. I've just come from the bank."

"Great work, son!" Mr. Harmon breathed rapturously. "That puts us pretty nearly where we belong. Sixty-two thousand! It's a running start for the big race! You certainly didn't get left at the post, Hilliard! Deducted your commissions yet?"

"No; I thought you'd rather do the bookkeeping in your own office and send me a check."

Harmon's approval was manifest.

"You show me the drafts and I'll write you a check this minute. Let's go sit down in the grill, and have something. This is fine work, now I want to tell you!"

"I rather thought so myself," Hilliard had led the way to the grill and commandeered a side-table. "In fact—" He lowered his voice. "In fact, as things have worked out, Mr. Harmon, I almost wish I hadn't tried to play it just this way. I mean—"

But Harmon had already grasped the point.

"Oh! Is that so? You must have made a bit. And all your old friends you were so hot up about—weren't they as peevish at you as you thought?"

"No," Hilliard grew warm. "I'd give a good deal," he said soberly, "if I hadn't tangled myself up in all that imitation history. Well, I'm in for it now. I've published so much that I didn't need to—I'm wondering how in thunder I can ever get out of it when the time comes. That was the idea, you remember—coals of fire. What's bothering me is that there's nobody to tend the furnace."

"But I thought you were so anxious to keep in the shade?"

"Yes, but I didn't need to crawl in a hole, and pull it in after me! Well, we'll wait and see. After I've gone a little further—and of course, you know I've hardly scratched the surface yet—"

"I know you haven't." The big man tucked his gloves into his breast pocket and brought out a silver cigarette case. "Have one?"

"Thank you. And you might take these drafts now; three of 'em, right? Good. Well—any developments?"

"What?" Harmon tapped his cigarette case in the palm of his left hand. "Oh, you mean the mine?"

Hilliard nodded. "Yes. Have you gone any further with the shaft yet? Two or three of the more cautious men are holding back until something happens with that."

"Shaft?" Harmon was puzzled. "What shaft?" He placidly stowed away the drafts. "I'm not sinking any new shafts at this stage of the game."

It was Hilliard's turn to be puzzled.

"Why, I mean the old shaft on Silverbow No. 1. Have you gone any further with it? I've told these people we were just starting. That's right, isn't it?"

Harmon laughed noisily.

"Oh, that shaft! Don't you think it's a little early to begin on that? Say, about ninety thousand dollars too early?"

As Hilliard sat gazing at him in profound bewilderment a waiter slid up alongside him and coughed for his attention.

"Gentleman wants to speak to you outside, Mr. Hilliard. In the lobby. Says it's important."

"Oh!" Hilliard drew the back of his hand across his forehead. "Tell him I'll come right out. Will you excuse me a moment, Mr. Harmon?"

"Sure! Go ahead." The promoter sat back comfortably and gave him a wave of dismissal. Hilliard, his pupils narrowing, went out to the doorway. A pace or two distant one of the vice presidents of the Trust and Deposit company—a friend of Cullen's and a very good man to know—was loitering restively.

"Hello, Hilliard," he said, wrinkling his forehead. "How are you? Look here, it's none of my business, of course, but I couldn't help wondering how much you know about that chap you're sitting with. Don't be offended; it's a friendly question. Simply my interest in you as one of our clients."

"Why, I know a good deal about him."

The banker continued solemnly:

"You probably know a lot more about him than I do, then, but just the same, I wanted to make sure. That's all." He turned, but Hilliard stopped him.

"Well, what do you know about him?"

"Before I answer that—is he a friend of yours?" The question was too blunt to be diplomatic, and too suggestive to be disregarded.

"Not exactly that; he's a rather good acquaintance, though. In a business way only—what he is socially I don't know, and I don't think I much care."

"So you don't need any advice about his business connections?"

"Why, I think not." He was nettled by the banker's manner.

"The only thing about it," said the vice president, nettled in his turn by Hilliard's brevity, "is that if you'd said you didn't know him very well, I'd have offered you some suggestions. I'd have expected you to thank me—really would. Under the circumstances, I can't very well go any further than this. Sorry I interrupted you."

"No, but wait a minute! I—"

The vice president's refusal was firm and definite.

"I can't say another word. Not another one. If you know him, that's sufficient. And he strode away across the lobby, leaving Hilliard dumfounded.

Mr. Harmon, smiling broadly, half arose from his chair as the masquerader came slowly back to the table and sat down hard.

"Well," he said. "More business?"

Hilliard shook his head.

"On the contrary." His voice had in it a curious dullness which the broker was quick to catch.

"No bad news, I hope?"

"I'm not sure. Let's go on discussing the mine."

"Not much else to discuss, is there? It's the same old mine." He looked intently at Hilliard. "What's got into you, anyway, in the last couple of minutes? You've lost all your pep. You look as though you've seen a ghost."

"Maybe I have," said Hilliard, with a short laugh.

"Well?"

Hilliard regarded him with an odd intermingling of respect and alarm. The respect was a holdover from the past—from the early impression he had formed from Harmon's resplendent offices in New York, and Harmon's contempt for money. He had considered his employer, at worst, a weak-principled vendor of legitimate securities.

"Mr. Harmon," Hilliard said reluctantly, "I'm in a mighty awkward position. . . . We can't afford to let anything spoil this campaign, can we?"

"Not if we can very well help it. What's bothering you?"

"For over ten weeks now, I've been building up a reputation—you know what I've been doing; you know how much depends on it. Your name hasn't been mentioned once; I've been selling this thing on my own personality—holding myself out as the principal. Well, the man who called me outside just now—and he's one of the solid banking crowd up here—he spoke of you as though he knew you. In fact—"

"To be perfectly frank—he called me out there to ask me about you. Now, I don't know what dealings you've ever had with him, or with anyone else up here, but it struck me that if there is anything between you and Syracuse, or any of its fairly big men, perhaps it would be better if I knew it. You see, this thing I'm selling is so darned personal—"

"Who was he?" Harmon's voice rasped.

"Embrace—of the Trust and Deposit company."

"Oh, yes," Harmon smoked reflectively. "Yes, we know each other. What did he have to say?"

"It wasn't so much what he said as the way he said it. I suppose you've had some disagreement with these people?"

"Some disagreement," admitted Harmon, grinning. "These up-state farmers and I love each other like a couple of strange bulldogs. Still—"

"If it isn't objectionable to you," said Hilliard, hesitating, "I'd rather like to know a bit about it, Mr. Harmon. The subject might come up later. It's almost sure to, now that Embrace's seen you and spoken to me about you. And if you've had any quarrel with this crowd, even if it wasn't your fault, and if it came out that I'm working for you, and there was any talk about it, you can see how I'd have to be on the defensive."

"So if you could just give me a faint idea—"

"Plain English is a lot better than a faint idea," said Harmon carelessly. "I floated some steel bonds up here once. Prettiest bonds you ever saw in your life, too."

"Oh! And they didn't turn out well?"

"Not exactly. The company was too much like Silverbow, I guess—all float and no lode."

For a moment, Hilliard thought that he hadn't heard aright.

"What was that you said?" he managed.

Harmon reiterated it.

"Too much Silverbow. Only they pumped the water out of it sooner than we will. That was five years ago."
